I regularly hitch a lift with a friend to work. The only problem with this is that he drops me off at 7am, so I have two hours to kill before the office opens. I'm on first name terms with the local Starbucks staff, but I thought for once I would try something different, now that the light is getting good at that time in the morning.

So I grabbed my camera bag, and clicked away. I'm reasonably happy with most of the shots, but still don't quite have the knack of balancing harsh early morning sky with dark alley ways....
