FaceBook Sync for Android is a handy application that scans your facebook friends list, and matches any of their profiles with your contacts list. It will then download their profile picture and attach it to their contact. It is an automatic match using the contact name, as most other data from facebook cannot be queried against, so the names need to be match able.

This is the developer's site:

And this is the market barcode:

It relies on you having a well put together contacts list, and it will download duplicates if you have them in your contacts. A top app though!
